Hall Attorneys and Federman & Sherwood Announce MPOWERHealth Data Breach Class Action

Lawsuit alleges patients were notified nearly seventeen months after discovery of unauthorized access to sensitive personal and medical information

EDNA, Texas - November 20, 2026 - Hall Attorneys, P.C., together with co-counsel Federman & Sherwood, announces the filing of a proposed class action against MPOWERHealth Holdings, LLC over a data breach involving sensitive patient information. The case, Griaznov v. MPOWERHealth Holdings, LLC, No. 3:26-cv-04097-K, was filed today in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division.

According to the complaint, an unauthorized party accessed MPOWERHealth's network between June 23 and June 26, 2025. Although MPOWERHealth detected the intrusion on June 26, 2025, it did not begin notifying affected individuals until November 13, 2026. The lawsuit alleges that this nearly seventeen-month delay deprived patients of the opportunity to take earlier steps to protect themselves.

MPOWERHealth's public notice states that the company determined on October 20, 2026, that impacted files may have contained personal information. The notice identifies a range of potentially affected information that varied by individual.

The complaint alleges that the information involved included names, contact information, dates of birth, health insurance details, billing and payment information, diagnoses, and medical procedures. Some affected records also allegedly included Social Security numbers, driver's license or government ID information, and financial account information.

"Patients deserve to know when their medical and personal information has been exposed so they can protect themselves," said Nicholas Hall of Hall Attorneys. "This lawsuit seeks answers about how the breach occurred, why notice took nearly seventeen months, and what MPOWERHealth will do to protect patients going forward."

MPOWERHealth provides surgical support and neurological services in partnership with hospitals, ambulatory surgery centers, and surgeons. As the complaint explains, patient information may have reached MPOWERHealth through another healthcare provider, including where a patient did not deal with MPOWERHealth directly.

Patient Allegations and Relief Sought

Plaintiff Denys Griaznov, a Cedar Park, Texas resident, alleges that his November 13 notice identified personal, insurance, and medical information, including diagnoses and procedure details. He reports increased spam communications, time spent responding to the breach, loss of privacy, and concern about future misuse.

The complaint asserts claims for negligence, breach of implied contract, and unjust enrichment. It seeks monetary relief and court-ordered protections for affected patients, along with other appropriate relief. The proposed class includes people whose private information was accessed or compromised in the breach, including those sent a notice.

Seeking Affected Patients and Additional Class Representatives

Hall Attorneys invites people who received an MPOWERHealth breach notice or otherwise believe their information was affected to request a free case evaluation and discuss participating in the litigation. The firm is particularly interested in hearing from patients who have experienced:

Identity theft or attempted fraud. Unfamiliar credit applications, new accounts, unauthorized charges, or other misuse of personal information.

Suspicious medical or insurance activity. Unexpected medical bills, insurance claims, or explanations of benefits for care they did not receive.

Scam communications or response costs. Targeted calls, emails, or letters, or time and expenses spent addressing the exposure of their information.

Patients may request a review even if MPOWERHealth received their information through another provider or they have not identified fraudulent charges.

Preserve Relevant Records and Request a Free Case Evaluation

Keep your notice and envelope, suspicious communications, relevant billing or insurance records, and documentation of related losses, time, and expenses. Provide a brief description when first contacting the firm so it can arrange secure delivery of sensitive records.
